

Rorke Did Buzz Cuba, FAA Says

Evidence indicates a twin-engine plane owned partly by photographer Alexander Rorke Jr. made an unauthorized flight over Cuba, a Federal Aviation Agency official said today.

The official, who withheld his name, said at Windsor Locks, Conn., there is "very strong circumstantial evidence" to support the FAA seizure of the Beechcraft.

The plane is impounded at Windsor Locks.

Rorke, of New York, and Geoffrey Sullivan, of Waterbury, Conn., a commercial pilot, own the plane.

Rorke told newsmen he dropped bombs on an oil refinery near Havana last Thursday night. He said the flight was not made from U. S. soil.
